FLAGLER COLLEGE

Flagler College is an independent, non-sectarian institution of higher education offering four year programs leading to the baccalaureate degree. Established in 1968, as a women's college, Flagler became a coeducational institution in 1971, and graduated its first class in the spring of 1972.

While the College was founded only 43 years ago, the seeds of its existence were sown in the nineteenth century. Its heritage is closely linked with the history of Florida through the life of Henry Morrison Flagler, oil magnate, railroad pioneer, and land developer. Mr. Flagler co-founded the Standard Oil Company with John D. Rockefeller, and initiated Florida's giant tourism industry through his railroad and his chain of luxury hotels. He is regarded as the single most pivotal figure in Florida's development, and his record of philanthropy and public spiritedness remains unmatched in the state's history.

The famous Hotel Ponce de Leon, built by Mr. Flagler in 1888, was one of the grandest resort hotels of its day. Now the centerpiece of the Flagler College campus, Ponce de Leon Hall stands as a landmark in American architecture. The legacy of Henry M. Flagler is bestowed on the College with a beauty that has not faded with the years.

As an independent college, Flagler is free of any control from church or state, free to chart its own course, consistent with the highest educational standards, traditions, and stated aims. The College is governed by a board of trustees and is accredited by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. The Southern Association is one of the six nationally recognized regional accrediting associations.

In 1975, the College embarked upon a major building program. Since that time, approximately $87 million has been committed to the development of the physical plant. Major projects include the construction of a student center, a library, an auditorium and performing arts theater, a gymnasium, an athletic field, dormitories and a tennis center. The College has also restored and renovated a number of facilities including the Florida East Coast Railway residence halls, Molly Wiley art building, residence halls in Ponce de Leon Hall, the Dining Hall, the Flagler Room, Wiley Hall, Twenty Valencia, Thompson Hall, Markland House, and Kenan Hall. Sixteen of the twenty-three campus buildings are historic structures.

Dr. William T. Abare, Jr., was appointed President of Flagler College in 2001, having served the College in various administrative positions since 1971. Prior to assuming his position as the institution's chief executive officer, Dr. Abare served as Executive Vice President and Dean of Academic Affairs. Dr. Abare succeeded Dr. William L. Proctor, who served as President for 30 years.
Since its founding, Flagler College has demonstrated a continuing commitment to quality and excellence. The College has assembled a highly competent faculty that is strongly committed to providing quality instruction, with particular emphasis on teaching and advising at the undergraduate level. Academic programs are built on a strong foundation in the traditional liberal arts with opportunities for specialized areas of study in more career-oriented programs.

The quality of the students is also reflective of the College's commitment to excellence. For fall 2010, the College received approximately four applications for every space in the incoming class of new students. The average SAT score of Flagler's entering freshman class was 1,102 (combined critical reading and math), which is 85 points above the national average for college-bound seniors. For the fall term, the College enrolled 2,522 full-time students representing 46 states, the District of Columbia, and American territories plus 31 foreign countries; 64% of the students are Florida residents.

The progress of Flagler College has been impressive. The College's strong fiscal position is the result of policies and practices designed to ensure prudent management of the institution's resources. As evidence of the effectiveness of these policies, its endowment now exceeds $60 million, and its tuition and fees are among the lowest for private colleges in the United States. The College is now recognized as U.S. News & World Report's America's Best Colleges, Princeton Review's The Best 357 Colleges, and America's 100 Best College Buys.

ACADEMIC CEREMONIES

The commencement ceremony is the means by which an institution publicly acknowledges and honors the accomplishments of those who have satisfactorily completed one or more programs of study. Many factors, such as the nature of the institution, the size of the graduating class, the weather, and the place of ceremony, affect the details of academic ceremonies. Institutions have wide latitude in meeting these conditions, and consequently there is considerable variation in customs and practices. At Flagler College, the commencement procession includes full-time faculty, administration, staff, and members of the Board of Trustees. The platform party consists of administrative officials, the commencement speaker, and the person giving the invocation and the benediction.

ACADEMIC REGALIA

Academic attire has its origin in the universities of twelfth century western Europe. Gowns and hoods were probably designed for warmth in the damp, unheated lecture halls. Gowns were fur-lined adaptations of the priestly toga, and hoods were worn to protect the tonsured head of the priest. The medieval university was much concerned with rank and privilege, and academic robes made visible the social and academic distinctions of the wearers. Like the military of medieval times with its pages, squires, and knights, the academic world has long had three basic grades of dignity and achievement. These are undergraduates, bachelors, and masters (or doctors). The distinction between masters and doctors is comparatively recent; both imply the right to teach. Academic regalia now serve as a visible reminder of the historic antecedents of intellectual pursuits.

In American universities of the late nineteenth century, these medieval costumes were revived to lend color to academic functions. As the number of colleges and universities increased, so did the styles of the academic attire. A need for uniformity was recognized, and in 1895, the Academic Costume Code was established. Academic regalia basically remained unchanged until 1960, when a committee of the American Council on Education issued revised guidelines.

There are three articles of approved academic attire: cap, gown, and hood. The customary head covering is the mortarboard, or Oxford cap, which is nine inches square on a soft pointed cap. It matches the gown in color and material with a tassel on the left side. Those who possess the doctor's degree wear a tassel of gold metallic threads. The velvet beret, modeled after the cap of Cambridge University, has also been adopted by some institutions.

Black is the most common color for academic gowns, although some universities have adopted their own institutional colors. Gowns of masters and doctors are generally ankle length and closed in front. The master's gown has pointed sleeves that are slit at the elbows. The doctor's gown has wide lapels of velvet, either black or the color of the scholar's specialization. The sleeves of the doctor's gown are full and bell-shaped, with three velvet chevrons, either black or colored like the lapels. There is no trimming on the gowns for the bachelor's or master's degrees. In recent years, some universities have broken away from the traditional scheme and allowed their doctors to wear brighter, more original costumes.

The hood, which drapes over the back of the gown, carries the greatest symbolism of all components of the academic costume. Its length, width and color of trim, and the color or colors of the lining denote the wearer's highest academic achievement. The master's hood is pointed; the doctor's hood is bell-shaped. The color of the border indicates the scholar's major field of study; the lining color (or colors) identifies the institution that conferred the wearer's degree. Hoods were originally trimmed in fur, but now have satin borders for masters and velvet for doctors. The following colors are associated with degrees frequently represented in academic processions:

ACADEMIC HONORS

Students at Flagler College may graduate with honors by virtue of earning exceptionally high grades. There are three designations for honors: summa cum laude (with the highest praise), which requires an overall grade point average of 3.90-4.00; magna cum laude (with great praise), which requires an overall average of 3.70-3.89; and cum laude (with praise), which requires an average of 3.50-3.69.

The designation of honor graduate is determined by the student's cumulative grade point average at the end of his or her senior year. To be eligible for honors a student must complete at least 56 semester hours of graded academic work at Flagler College. Because grades for the current term are not due until after the commencement program is printed, the names of the honor graduates do not appear in the program. Honor graduates will be recognized during the ceremony, and the designation for honors will be announced when the honor graduates are awarded their diplomas.
